There is no doubt that a dementia friendly care setting would facilitate better service provision, but what elements are essential for building up a dementia friendly care setting? This workshop will introduce the pragmatic standards, practices and behaviours which professional staff can adopt in elderly service settings so as to facilitate service users' engagement in the environment. The following two key goals will be focused:

1. How to create an environment which supports the needs of people with dementia while keeping them safe from dangers such as fall.
2. How to create a setting in which service users with dementia can demonstrate their abilities to full extent, in all things from mundane to creative, and their personal identity can be reinforced.

Time	Topic
2:00 to 2:05 pm	Welcome and Introduction
2:05 to 3:05 pm	The Innovation and Principles of Environment Design for People with Dementia
3:05 to 3:30 pm	Practical Exercises and Sharing of Environmental Design: Case Study
Break
3:45 to 4:45 pm	Uphold the Quality of Care: Reconsider the Dementia Friendly Design of Day Care Settings and Residential Care Settings
4:45 to 5:00 pm	Q & A Session

Prof. June Andrews

Professor June Andrews RMN, RGN, FRCN is an inspirational woman whose impact on healthcare in the UK, and further afield, is profound. She works independently to improve dementia care.

Professor Andrews made ambitious things happen during her decade directing Stirling's Dementia Services Development Centre. She conceived of an online design guide for care homes and hospitals, ensuring wall-to-wall media coverage and heightened public and professional awareness of the practical things you can do to make life better for people with dementia. Now leaving that behind, she works independently to improve the lives of people with dementia and their careers.

She has worked in many countries including the Netherlands, France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Ireland, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Saudi Arabia, and Hong Kong; she has been an adviser to the Canadian Knowledge Translation Network, and judged awards for the European Foundations in Dementia and the NHS and Design Council.

She received the Fellowship of the Royal College of Nursing (RCN), the highest honour awarded to nurses in the UK who have made an exceptional contribution to health care.

June supports other health and social care teams as a coach and mentor, and has led successful teams for three decades. Because of her considerable achievements as a nurse leader, she received the Chief Nursing Officers' Lifetime Achievement Award in 2012. In 2013 she was listed in the Health Services Journal as one of the fifty most inspirational women in health care and separately as one of the 100 most influential clinicians in England. In 2016 she was awarded the OBE.

* Attendance certificate will be provided to participant who attends full session.
